With a vast experience in organizing international scientific events, Titu Maiorescu University launched in 2019 a new scientific challenge through the organization of the International Conference “Rule of Law as Promoter of Human Rights and Economic Growth”.

The event was co-organized together with the international organization European Public Law Organization - EPLO, which gathers the most important experts in public law worldwide. Indeed, some of the most important voices of European Public Law honored the invitation and debated on the probably most influential political and legal concept of our times. The agenda of the conference speaks for itself <https://www.utm.ro/en/faculty-law-bucharest/research/the-international-conference-rule-of-law-as-promoter-of-human-rights-and-economic-growth-2019/> )

Based on the success of this first event, the initial co-organizers, Faculty of Law of Titu Maiorescu University and European Public Law Organization – EPLO, together with Salvador de Maradiaga University Institute of European Studies – University of A Coruña, took the decision to hold a follow up conference on the subject, to assess the transformations in this field in the challenging times that the global community is facing since 2020. Therefore, the 2022 edition of the conference will address these challenges under the title “Rule of Law after the Pandemic, in Times of War and Economic Crisis (Three Years Later)”.

The workings of the conference will take the shape of four thematic panels:

- i. The Rule of Law in European Union
